On off nights, The Big Chief Drive-In featured row after row of outmoded speakers who spoke to no one and glistened under star-studded heavens like metal scarecrows, naked and abandoned.

But this night.

Oh, this night.

Teens in their Halloween costumes pranced from one car to another. Beds of pickups and trunks of cars unleashed hordes of zombies, vampires, witches, ghouls, and goblins--some the likes never seen on Earth--all to the delight of moviegoers.

"You know tonight is a double whammy, spooky-dooky Halloween?" OCD tells Ratso. They are employed at The Big Chief.

The statement proves to be more than a comical remark when OCD, Ratso, and their coworkers discover a parking lot full of abandoned cars and ask a chilling question.

What happened to all the people?

The third in the Creep Mesquite Series, Sparkers is a novella written for readers with a serious addiction to classic movies and those who love a bit of suspense. The thrill of the unknown will keep you turning page after page, while author Clara Bush draws you into her world. A world of mystery. A world of anticipation. A world that will keep you guessing until the end.
