Arquitectura política del miedo (Spanish Edition) Robinson Salazar

Los miedos en el siglo XXI son el fenómeno más pronunciado en las voces de los ciudadanos y forma parte de la vida cotidiana en muchas familias porque la incertidumbre económica, la inseguridad social, la alteración climática y nuevas amenazas naturales, las guerras permanentes, el crecimiento incontrolable del crimen organizado y los riesgos informáticos han demostrado cuan frágiles somos y la carencia de recursos que tenemos para afrontar los escenarios cambiantes y las coyunturas impredecibles que vivimos a diario. Entramos al túnel de la inseguridad y la angustia, nada ni nadie puede dotar de sentido y seguridad a las demandas ciudadanas, el Estado se acható, la globalización rompió las fronteras y soberanías nacionales, los poderes de facto del mercado imponen la política económica, los movimientos sociales derrumban entramados institucionales y la certeza se diluye en un mar de contradicciones y sin encontrar una dársena donde anclar la seguridad y desalojar los miedos de las subjetividades colectivas.

El miedo en la sociedad es, entonces, incommensurable debido a su manifestación en lo extenso de la capilaridad del cuerpo social y con diversas expresiones. Existen los miedos a ser pobre, a quedar excluido, perder la vida, llegar a desemplearse o estar enfermo por epidemias emergentes, quizás a no contar con su familia o la desaparición de sus padres, en fin, hay diversos miedos pero siempre existe una fuente de miedo porque no existe el miedo a lo desconocido sino al ente, sujeto o factor que lo determina.

Este libro es una edición conjunta con el Instituto de Investigaciones Gino Germani de la Universidad de Buenos Aires.
