Blindfold (Hugh MacLennan Poetry Series) John Asfour

A sense of exile and belonging dominates the poems, following the journey of a blind man whose life in his new land has been hampered by prejudice and barriers to communication. Exposing the rich and surprising possibilities of a life that has undergone a frightening transformation, Blindfold relates feelings of loss, displacement, and disorientation experienced not only by the disabled but by everyone who finds themselves separated from the norm.

Silver Threads

He recalls
the absence of sound, the impossible silence the disappearance of light.

He is only aware of the movement of his mother's hand inside
her purse, looking for her handkerchief.

He recalls her
warning not to play
with unknown objects
the type that explode on impact. Later, he lies in the dark remembering how she pointed out the silver threads of the morning light just the day before

and he sparkles
with guilt.
